Looking around Eastsound, I can't help but notice the proliferation of strollers, babies and preschool youngsters...seems very atypical from the norm of the past 30 years...I'm wondering if there's merit in including some local benchmarks which might be useful to to quantify what seems to be an influx of young families...F>

Thanks much for having a thorough conversation with Sandi and for sharing the population memo.

You have done a really thorough job; many kudos.

Another solid step in a journey of 1000 miles.

And, from one of my favorite Robert Frost poems, (stopping by woods), adjusted slightly for all of us:

"Miles to go before we sleep"
