From John Titus
PO box 611 Eastsound

I was not able to contact the county at compplancomments@sanjuanco.com

We built a house too far from Electric to provide primary power. Therefore we opted to use Propane for heating, hot water, and stove.

We also have a propane generator for when the power goes out, we still have well water.

We are getting old, and were getting tired of the firewood (cutting and smoke) and decided that propane was a solution.

Propane is a product of making gasoline. As long as they make gas, we will have propane.

If at an old age we are forced to quit propane for environmental reasons, we will somehow have to go back to burning wood.

I am sure wood is more polluting than propane.

Aside from that, has anyone considered that SJC is the only county in the state that does not have vehicle emissions testing?

That is because we do not have a state highway.

Same for heating our house.

Want wood smoke instead?
